SECTION 36: HAWAIIAN MAPS

[36/1] QUIMPER. Plano de las Yslas de Sanduic [i.e. Sandwich] reconocidas de Orden de Exmo Sr. Conde de Revilla Giego Virrey de N(ueva) E(spana) pro Dn. Manuel Quimper en el ano de 1791.

Manuscript outline map on laid paper, watermarked "J. Kool", and with "11" on upper right corner; 13 1/4 x 19 1/4 inches, with margins. N.p., 1791.

:: An extraordinary and important manuscript map of the Hawaiian Islands, dated only fourteen years after its first discovery by Captain James Cook in 1778. England in the 18th century began laying claim to the Pacific North West, commencing with Cook in 1778 and continuing with fur traders who began appearing in 1785. The area was claimed by Spain, who began her effective occupation of upper California in 1769. A territorial dispute was resolved by a convention signed at Nootka in 1790, with Captain George Vancouver the English representative, and Captain Juan Francisco de la Bodega y Quadra representing Spanish interests. Manuel Quimper, one of the Spanish party, visited the Kona coast of Hawaii in March and April, 1791, and upon his return to Nootka, shared information with Vancouver, who in return gave the Spanish access to his maps of Hawaii, from which this is partly copied, and with the tracks of Quimper's voyage indicated. When Bodega y Quadra returned to San Blas, Mexico early in 1793, he sent in his report which included this map among other drawings and maps.
